WAYSIDE FENCE COMPANY HELPS EAGLE SCOUT REACH IMPORTANT GOAL

Bay Shore, NY: Sebastian Camino, a 17 year old Boy Scout in Babylon's Troop 1, had an important project to complete in his quest at becoming an Eagle Scout. He researched one of his passions, animal welfare, and learned that The Islip Animal Shelter in Bay Shore had very specific needs: two new storage cabinets and a sitting bench for visitors. That's when he reached out to the always charitable Douglas DeLorenzo, President of Wayside Fence, and a former Scout Master for Troop 1.

On Saturday, September 1st, in Wayside's wood shop, the boys, and some of their dads, got busy assembling and painting the prefabricated shelving and bench. When everything was ready to be delivered to the shelter, the Scouts carried the items to a waiting van and off they went.

"Sebastian and his fellow Troop members had a blast with this project", said DeLorenzo. "They truly worked as a team to make something both practical and meaningful. It was a joy to witness. And the shelter absolutely loved and appreciated what these kids did. They put their hearts into it and it showed. This is what Scouting is all about, and we at Wayside Fence were happy to be a part of it".
